

Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. The idea that they would abuse their position to try and influence public opinion in something as important as a national election is appalling. Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. Thank you for your time.
